Understanding Challenges of the Contemporary World Through Buddhism, Christianity, Judaism, Islam, and Hinduism

October 19, 2015
6:00-9:00pm
Michigan Rooms A-B,
1st floor of Harding Mott University Center

“One of the many purposes served by religious systems is to help their followers make sense of the world around them, particularly with respect to the most challenging problems that we face, from the level of the family to the level of the species. More specifically, two persistent and perennial problems that many have turned to religions for answers to are violence and poverty. The panelists will address what their religions say about understanding violence, poverty and inequality.”

Father James Mangan, St. Mathew Catholic Parish
Rabbi Yisroel Weingarten, Chabad House Lubavitch of Eastern Michigan
Mr. Abdullah Waheed, Imam at the Flint Islamic Center
Rev. Kosho, Foundation for Shingon Buddhism

For questions please contact Lacey Faulkner 810-762-3366 or lfaulkne@umflint.edu