Prime For Life is an evidence-based experience helping people making high-risk alcohol or drug related choices accept the need to change their attitudes, beliefs, and behaviors. Every element of the program is designed to promote change and reduce problems.

After Prime For Life, most participants express confidence in planning to reduce their substance use and rate Prime For Life as helpful in developing those skills.

Prime For Life classes range from 8 to 12 hours. Class times are flexible, but are usually broken down into 1-2 hours; 1-2 days a week over several weeks. The program includes a participant self-assessment, individual and group activities, and a motivational approach to influence behavior change. The program can be used by judges, probation officers, or school counselors to follow up individually with clients as a plan for alternatives to suspension/MIP or referral to additional services if needed.
