ATTENTION: PSY Course Revisions

Greetings PSY Students,

Fall 2016 courses are now viewable within SIS and many of you have begun planning for registration to begin later this month. Please make note of the following PSY course changes:

PSY 323: Advanced Research and Writing in Psychology is now PSY 400: Capstone Experience for Psychology

Prerequisites: Grades of C (2.0) or better in PSY 319 and one from: PSY 309, 313, 315, 316, 317, 333, 336, 341, 343, 365, 377, or consent of instructor.

Description: Capstone experience for psychology majors. Review of current and classic research literature. Topics vary. May be reelected to a total of 8 credits.

PSY 329: Advanced Research Topics in Psychology is now PSY 401: Advanced Research Topics

Prerequisites: Grades of C (2.0) or better in PSY 319, PSY 322, and at least one core course from: PSY 309, 313, 315, 316, 317, 333, 336, 341, 343, 365, 377, or consent of instructor.

Description: Review of current and classic research literature. Possible research design, execution and analysis. Topics vary. May be reelected to a total of 8 credits.

*Program requirements haven't changed****

- PSY 400 substitutes for PSY 323; PSY 401 substitutes for PSY 329.
- PSY 400 IS NOT a prerequisite of PSY 401. Students may elect to take either course in any order as needed for their specific PSY degree program.

- Either PSY 400 or PSY 401 can fulfill the CAS General Education Capstone requirement just as they did when they were PSY 323 and PSY 329.

- Students applying for graduation will need to see a PSY faculty advisor to obtain a course substitution if they have not already taken PSY 323 and/or PSY 329 before Fall 2016.
